

A-Framed Retreat At Mutiny Bay

By

MARGERY R. PHILLIPS

DR. AND MRS. ROBERT H. BARNES and their three daughters have a base for week-end and vacation fun the year around at Whidbey Island's Mutiny Sands development.

The well-known triangular, or A-frame, design was chosen by the Barneses because of its simplicity, economy and suitability to the building site. The main house has two levels, the upper one a balcony used as a sleeping area for guests. The Barneses' sleeping rooms are in a separate wing.

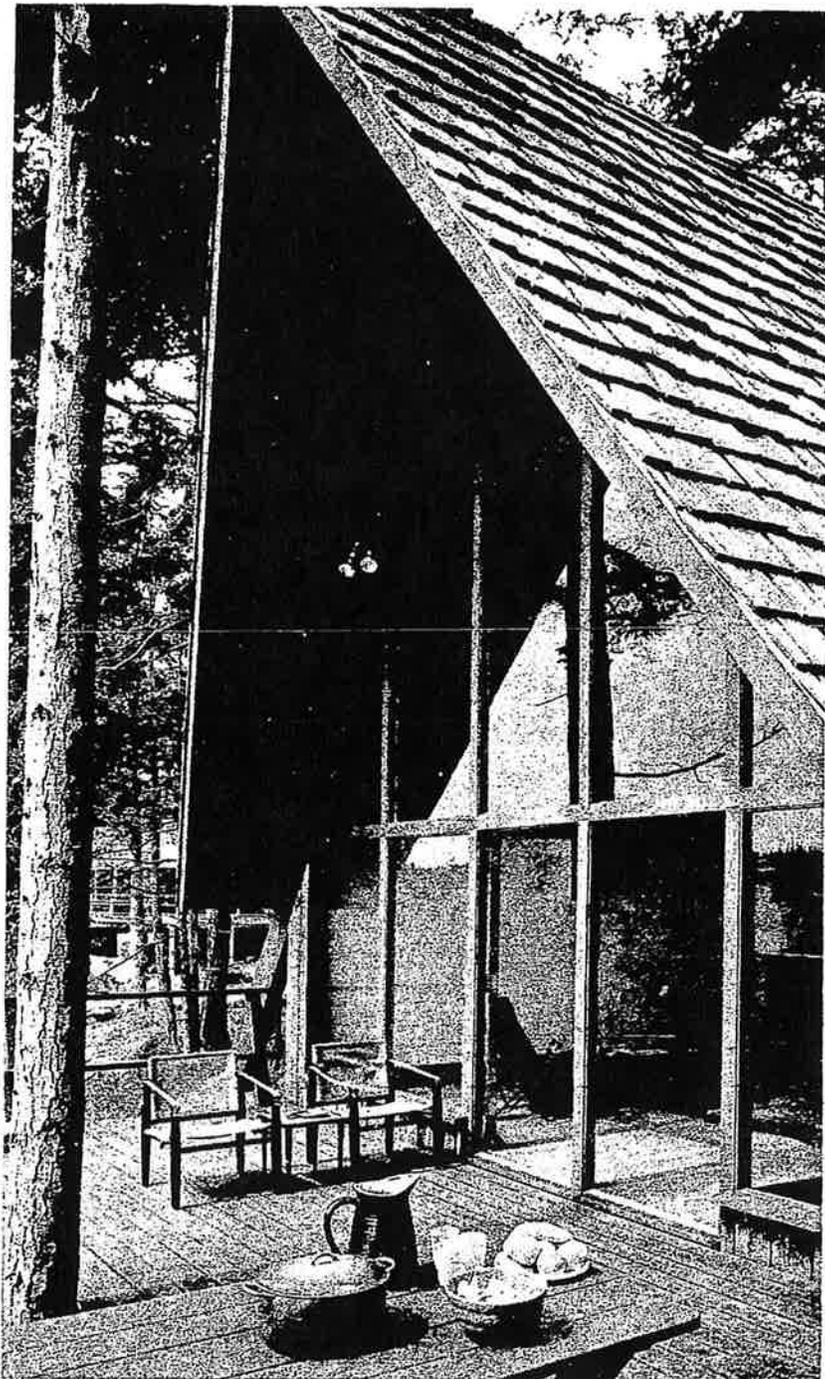

The sloping site commands a good view of the beach and the bay, and the house was designed to take full advantage of it. One end of the structure, facing the view, is of glass, and outside the wall is a large deck.

Here is a delightful vacation house in the heart of a colony of young and growing families who like to make the most of their leisure time.

Nature crammed lots more health than vitamin C in the meat of a Sunkist Orange

What does a Sunkist Orange have that's missing in frozen juice? Good, rich meat that's loaded with health builders. Protopectins* and bio-flavonoids are just as nature grows it, you get all the natural vitamin C plus 50 other nutrients. So why short yourself? Eat whole fresh Sunkist Oranges — drink whole fresh orange juice.

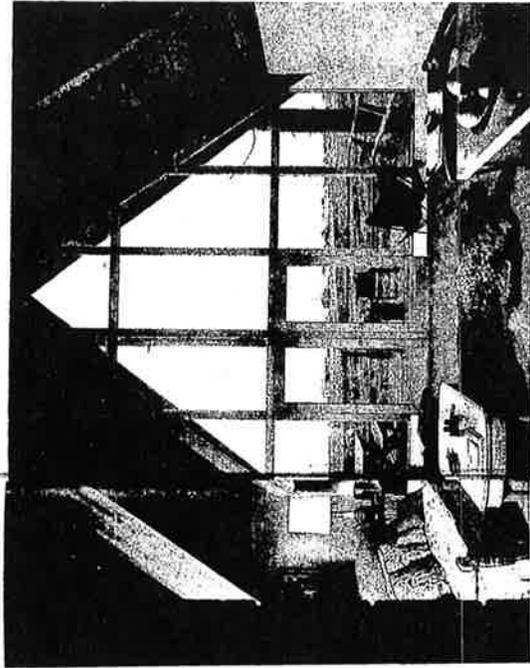

Only the very finest oranges are stamped

The triangular framing of the Berner family's vacation house on Whidbey Island permitted the design of a high end wall of glass, giving the occupant a spectacular view and sky from their large and comfortable living and dining room.

The living area is defined by a handsome corner fireplace made of brick and concrete blocks. Behind the fireplace, an open stairway climbs to a wide balcony, a sleeping area for overnight guests.

The kitchen, compact but up to date in every detail, is separated from the living area by a snack bar. Under the window and on the back wall are sink, range, dishwasher and refrigerator.

The fatal attraction here is toasted oat goodness. Cheerios are shaped round to be toasted crisp all 'round. Strawberries love 'em! People, too! "G" what Goodness.

From the balcony, one gets a good idea of the size and relationship of the indoor living area and the adjoining deck of the Robert H. Barnes vacation house.

The parents bedroom has its own view patio outside a shoji-screened wall.

The entrance to the house is simple and warmly inviting. The Dutch door and flanking windows are sheltered by a flat roof over a ground-level concrete-slab porch.
