Yama was a Japanese village on Bainbridge Island, WA that was occupied from the 1880s to 1920s. Archaeologists from Olympic College are beginning to recover traces of this important chapter in Washington State history and the history of Japanese Americans.

Students from the Summer 2015 Olympic College Archaeology Field School and faculty will share their experiences and findings about this significant historic village. Presentations will include an artifact display, slide shows, and talks by students and faculty.
