protect the past, shape the future

The background of the image is a photograph of a large, dark green rock formation on Bainbridge Island. The rock is shaped like a frog's face, with two large, white, circular eyes and a wide, red, open mouth. In the lower-left foreground, there is a smaller rock formation that also resembles a frog's face, with white eyes and a red mouth. The text "Frog Rock" is written in a large, bold, white sans-serif font, and "Bainbridge Island" is written in a slightly smaller, white sans-serif font below it.

A photograph of the Phillips House in Spokane, a modern single-story home with a black metal frame and large glass windows. The house is surrounded by tall evergreen trees and some smaller shrubs. A central wooden door is visible, flanked by windows. Green vines are climbing up the black frame on either side of the door. The overall scene is set in a wooded area with a gravel path leading to the house.

A photograph of the Skagit Salmon Hatchery Building in Marblemount, Washington. The building is a long, single-story structure with a dark roof and light-colored siding. It features a central cupola and several windows. In the foreground, there is a small stream with a metal walkway and railings crossing it. The background shows snow-capped mountains under a cloudy sky. The text "Skagit Salmon Hatchery Building" is overlaid in large, bold, white letters, and "Marblemount" is overlaid in smaller, white letters below it.

Skagit Salmon Hatchery at Marblemount which is planned for a 40-pond station. Twenty ponds are built and in operation. The first stream plant of fish from this station was in 1948.

The image shows the exterior of a single-story building with yellow vertical siding and a dark roof. A set of concrete steps with black metal railings leads to a dark entrance. To the right of the entrance, a small plaque on the wall reads "RAY GIBSON'S CABALLEROS CLUB" and "FOUNDED: 1957". In the foreground, there are some green plants and a black utility box. The text "Ray Gibson Caballeros Club Tacoma" is overlaid in large white font.

The background image shows a two-story historic brick building with multiple windows, some of which are boarded up. In the foreground, there are railroad tracks that curve to the right. A chain-link fence runs across the middle ground. To the left, a blue pickup truck is partially visible. The sky is overcast, and the overall scene has a historical, somewhat desolate feel.
