I wonder if the social history of racial segregation, exclusion of Black and other people of color from Wallingford via racial covenants, violence and real estate and banking practices will be noted as a contribution to this application? Perhaps the same standard applied to some earlier applications, requiring recognition of tribal and immigrant community roles in the history of the applications could be applied to this process, to require acknowledgement of the role of white supremacy in both the history and the cultivation of this application?

Providing prefuntary notice in the paper and obscure websites that can only be affected by formal objections only by property owners and not all residents is not the way to conduct inclusive democracy. Si Hi - My name is Siobhan Ring. I'm a homeowner in a different neighborhood in Seattle. I appreciated the emphasis on social history in consideration of applications discussed earlier during this meeting. I wonder if the social history is similarly going to be included in this review? Will the social history of racial segregation, exclusion of Black people in particular and other people of color from Wallingford via racial covenants, violence and threats and real estate steering and discriminatory banking practices will be noted here as well as contributing to the development of this neighborhood and the development of this application? This neighborhood was created and shaped by white supremacy policies and practices. If it is going to be preserved as historic, which will contribute to the maintenance of those racial hierarchies, you are perhaps obligated at a minimum to acknowledge that is part of your decision and its implications. I encourage you to reject this application.

Chris Moore - WTHP to Everyone 12:06 PM

CM Regardless of the zoning classification in Seattle for SFR/NR, etc - National Register designation has no bearing on local land use regulations. National Register designation does not prevent a homeowner from opting to sell their single family home for the purpose of demolition and creation of a more dense development. Nor does it create any level of design guidelines or review for building multi-family infill that doesn't exist already in the local code.

Michael Houser to Hosts and panelists 12:06 PM

MH If we are going to chime in... Better to share actual regulations rather than articles in newspapers.

Doug Trumm to Everyone 12:07 PM

DT Chris: This is false. It is a City policy to retain RN zoning in historic districts.

The designation will have a land use implication going forward.

Rebecca Berg to Everyone 12:09 PM

RB Every neighborhood in Seattle is historic. Limiting the historic designation to a specific street or area where the Street Car was particularly impactful would be fine. Declaring such a large swath of area "historic" is a thinly veiled attempt to prevent change in the neighborhood.

The organization was formed in 2017 and its first year has grown a following of more than 200 people.
