

Buckminster Fuller to Speak At Environmental Conference

R. Buckminster Fuller, noted philosopher, engineer and inventor of the geodesic dome, will speak Saturday to conclude a three-day program on the environment at Inglemoor High School, 15400 Simonds Road N. E., Bothell.

Fuller, 74, whose unconventional ideas on the environment have won him fame, will speak on "Our Future Environment" at 7 p. m. Saturday. His speech will be open to the public.

Fuller designed the dome housing the United States Pavilion that won acclaim at Expo '67 in Montreal. He has envisioned domed cities in the future, floating on water or in the air. The author of the prefabrication concept, he is a member of the faculty of Southern Illinois University.

The program will open at 7 p. m. Thursday with an introductory address by David Brower, former executive director of the Sierra Club.

R. BUCKMINSTER FULLER

Brock Evans, a lawyer who represents conservation groups, will speak on the "Environmental Crisis in the Pacific Northwest" at 8:15 p.m. His presentation will be followed by a film.

Friday's program will begin at 1 p. m. with a speech on "Environmental Concerns in King County" by County Executive John Spellman. A panel discussion on the "Crisis in the Cities" will begin at 2:15 p. m.

Prof. John Hessel will discuss "Population versus Ecology: Facts of Life in a Closed System" at 7 p. m. State Senator Joel Pritchard and County Councilman Edward Heavey will speak on "Effecting Legislative Action on Environmental Problems" at 8:15 p.m. A student film will follow.

Saturday's program will open at 1 p. m. with a presentation titled "Avoiding Terracide" by Dr. William Houff. A panel discussion on "Industry and Pollution Control" is scheduled at 1:30 p. m.

At 2:30 p. m., Dr. Arthur Kruckeberg will speak on "Do We Have the Right to Pollute?" A panel discussion, "Several Views on Pollution," will follow at 3. A debate on a dam proposed for the Middle Fork of the Snoqualmie River is scheduled for 4 p. m.

A display of 100 prints by The Times' Josef Scaylea also will be featured during the three days.