INTRODUCTION

THE CRAFTSMAN BUNGALOW BOOK is designed to present to those interested in home building the very highest types of bungalows adapted to the cooler climates of the North and East. This book is unique in the fact that while every design or plan shown is a true bungalow, none of them is subject to the handicaps found in the California types, which make no provision for basements, heating plants, and other necessary utilities without which a Northern home is a failure. It is arranged for the purpose of showing, by illustration, floor plans and word descriptions the attractive and comfort-giving features of the Craftsman Bungalow. Many residents of the temperate zone look with envious eyes upon the cozy bungalows of California, while they bemoan the apparent fact that such a type of house would be anything but home-like in cooler climates, with no basement for heating plants or other features of primary importance in a locality where the winters are cold or wet, as in the Northwest and East. To show them that the bungalow type may be adapted to any climate, I have taken the latest designs and arranged the plans for this climate so they will give the greatest degree of satisfaction to the bungalow owner. Realizing some years ago the certain popular demand now being felt for smaller and more convenient houses, I have made a specialty of designing and building these homes in the Northern states and with a success which has been a matter of pride not only to the owners but myself as well. Of late other architects have taken up the subject, forced to meet the demand as best they could, whether or not they were familiar with the needs of their sections. They have gone so far in their eagerness to meet all wishes as to apply the term bungalow to many crude alterations of cottages or even more substantial types of residences.

The designing of an artistic bungalow of the true type requires as much skill and education as does any other branch of the architect's work. The man with the experience and training is the one to give you the best results. All of the designs in this book are bungalows pure and simple. Most of them are my own ideas. They are only a few of the many designs on hand, but they will serve to show you something of the concentrated beauty, convenience and comfort to be obtained from owning a real Craftsman Bungalow.

My estimates of cost, while applying in this city, may be above or below the cost elsewhere, depending on the difference in price of material and labor of all kinds in various parts of the country. If the exterior and floor plans are suitable, a more or less expensive material may be used to get practically the same results, when the cost figure does not satisfy. A few minor changes in plans can be made to suit individual tastes without changing the outside appearance and without the great expense of re-drawing. If special designs are preferred, I will prepare them at a cost of $5 a room.

FULL VALUE FOR YOUR MONEY

My plans are practical working drawings, complete in every detail, and ready for any good carpenter, mason or builder to go ahead with the work. At the prices quoted, both for special and stock plans, I furnish two copies of complete blueprint plans, consisting of 1/4-inch scale drawings of foundation, first and second floor plans (in two-story houses), four elevations and large scale details of all interior fixtures, such as fireplaces, arches, kitchen cabinets and other finish features. Typewritten specifications to supplement the drawings are enclosed to cover the general conditions of the contract, such as the excavation, masonry, carpentry, plastering, hardware, electrical work, plumbing, tinting, painting and other details.

SPECIAL PLANS: If you do not find a plan that meets your individual requirements, I will be glad to get up a special design for you, incorporating your own ideas. In this way you can get exactly what you want. It is my aim to give the people the best professional service at the lowest possible cost, and in this way make every customer a live advertiser. My charges for special plans are $5.00 a room (I do not count bath rooms, pantries or sleeping porches).

In ordering special plans, kindly give the following information:

- (1) Size and approximate grade of lot, also points of compass and direction of the most pleasant view.
- (2) Nature of soil, depth and size of basement.
- (3) Concrete, brick or stone foundation.
- (4) Construction—frame, brick, stone or concrete.
- (5) Number of rooms, and a rough sketch of the arrangement of same.
- (6) Height of ceilings in basement and first floor.
- (7) Kind of wood used in construction, as well as in the interior finish.
- (8) Heating—hot air, steam or hot water.
- (9) Fireplace and location of same.
- (10) Inside trim, wainscoting, kitchen cupboards, buffet, beam ceilings, chair rail, art glass, china closets, etc.

TERMS: My business is done strictly on a cash basis. No order will be filled unless accompanied by a remittance. This is an invariable rule and is made necessary on account of doing business in so many different parts of the country and is not meant as a reflection on your financial standing. These terms apply to everyone.

After the plans leave my office, I try to keep in touch with the builder and am glad to answer any inquiry or assist him in any way with my experience. Why? Because I want every bungalow built from my plans to prove a lasting advertisement for

Yours sincerely,

Jud Yoko

506—Large rooms on somewhat irregular lines. Red cedar shingles in alternate wide and narrow courses cover the exterior walls, with cement stucco for finish of porch pillars and chimney. The interior is divided into five large rooms, a bathroom and sleeping porch; all exceptionally well lighted. The living room fifteen feet by twenty-five and a half feet has an immense clinker brick fireplace and unusual ceiling beams. The dining room has a peaked ceiling, giving the appearance of being plastered directly on the roof timbers. Heavy beams help out the scheme.

FLOOR PLAN
 No. 467

467—This is a style of bungalow that is becoming very popular in the Western states. The lines of the house are very graceful and the whole effect is very attractive. The design calls for brick veneer to the height of the watertable with sawed shakes above. The brick-faced porch and chimney give the building a substantial air of plenty, borne out by the very liberal lines of the house. The living and dining rooms are connected by a wide opening, which may, if desired, convert them into practically one room. There are two bed rooms with small halls, each with a door leading to either the kitchen or bath room. Perhaps the most attractive feature of this design is the large breakfast room, which opens from the pantry and dining room and so arranged that it has windows on three sides.

322—While varying somewhat from what one would ordinarily term bungalow, this design has several points of merit. The light and cheerful aspect of the cement plaster forms a pleasing contrast with the dark red brick pilasters. The house is very conveniently arranged, and each bed room is provided with a clothes closet and lavatory. Access is had to the bath room through a hall, which is lighted and ventilated by a skylight. The dining room is paneled to a height of the plate rail, above which in square forms extend quaint Dutch figures around the room.

634—In design this is a good example of that known on the Pacific Coast as the aeroplane type, and its style of architectural treatment, its many curved rafters, ridges and brackets is derived from the architecture of Japan and China. The "curve" idea has been carried out very consistently and just far enough, as a study of the exterior will convince. The cobblestone work in this house is of the very best. In plan this is one of the best arrangements for five rooms. A splendid living room opening to two porches, the side porch being in reality a carriage entrance, a dining room, kitchen, two bed rooms and bath. Note the large closets and the way the stairs have been schemed to take up as little room as possible. The second story, which we are unable to show for lack of room, has one bed room or dressing room, and a large sleeping porch open on three sides.

327—This eight-room bungalow is of a type which we may call medium cost and large accommodation. The design savors of great substantiality, notably in the foundation walls and the granite rubble of the porch work and chimneys. The little note of half timber which shines in gables is a very pretty note. The disposition of the various rooms is good, and a room, the library, having its own light and roomy closet, the bath room and storage space under the eaves.

Use plenty of windows, glass is cheaper than lumber.

323—A POPULAR DESIGN OF CEMENT PLASTERED BUNGALOW

JUD YONHO THE BUNGALOW CRAFTSMAN
SEATTLE WASHINGTON

323—We show here a very popular design for a cement plaster bungalow, roofed with imitation Spanish tile made from galvanized sheet iron. While the first cost of such a roof is somewhat higher than shingles, when one considers the saving in the continual upkeep of expense of a shingle roof the ultimate cost of a more permanent material will be seen to be no higher. The rooms are larger than are ordinarily found in a bungalow and are arranged for convenience.

Estimated cost$3,200.00
Price of plans as shown or reversed 15.00

He that has a bungalow to put his head in, has a good headpiece.

337—A story and a half house of very pleasing proportions and carefully thought out, different detail. Note the extra wide verge boards and rich, heavy moldings. The first story is shingles in alternate courses. The second story is cement plaster on galvanized metal lath. The curved hood over the front entrance and the balcony effect of the second story windows break up an otherwise rather plain wall. Three large, well planned rooms are provided on the first floor, with splendid outlook on all sides. The upper floor, reached from the reception hall, has fine bedrooms and another room which can be used either as a bedroom or sleeping porch. The bathroom is placed where it is handy to all rooms, as well as economical for plumbing.

457—It is hard to keep from getting enthusiastic about as pretty a bungalow as this, especially after an inspection of the house itself. "Solid and sensible" just describe it. Where large rooms and closet space are needed, it would be hard to find a nicer plan than this. The entrance is into a vestibule which opens into a reception hall with living and dining rooms on opposite sides. The porch floor is cement on dirt filling. The house is very well planned with all the rooms independent of each other, yet easy of access. The dining room has an exceptionally fine buffet. The living room is large and has a large open fireplace of a new design in pressed brick.

249—Elaborate both as to the outside and inside design, this bungalow will attract the better class of house owners not only by its pretentious appearance but by the features of the interior, which include a cozy vestibule and reception hall, fireplace in both living and dining rooms, a buffet in the last named room, and, best of all, a breakfast room practically enclosed in glass, available to the kitchen with the same easy access as the dining room. The exterior of the house employs cobblestones and brick on the front with artistic effect, while the dark woodwork with its lighter trimmings makes a pleasing background for the house. The reception hall leads into the commodious living room, which practically extends from the front of the house to the breakfast room in the rear, with a huge fireplace exactly in the center.

Estimated cost$3,000.00

See page three regarding special plans.

419—This is one of the extreme type of bungalows, and wherever built it cannot help but attract a great deal of favorable comment. The very exterior of the house spells comfort. The use of cobblestones of assorted size and color for the fireplace and porch walls adds a pleasing touch to the exterior. The interior is about as conveniently arranged as is possible to plan a bungalow. Every room has a clothes closet and a pass hall connecting with the bath. The dining room has beam ceilings and paneled wainscoting. The plumbing in this house is especially well arranged; in being grouped together it can be installed at a smaller cost than is general in bungalows.

Estimated cost$3,000.00
Price of plans as shown or reversed 15.00

Bed room windows should give light to your dressing table.

524—Another extremely popular design of five rooms on the ground floor with two bed rooms, one 14 by 14 feet, the other 10 feet 6 inches by 14 feet, and sleeping porch of ample size on the second floor. The fireplace is enclosed in an angle nook with seats on either side. Large, roomy closets are provided for all the bed rooms and the bath room is located convenient to all rooms. The plan calls for a brick flue in the kitchen for kitchen range and laundry stove. The furnace flue is in the fireplace chimney.

118—This seven-room home is twenty-four feet by forty feet on the ground. By the clever use of several very ordinary materials, each in its proper place and broad horizontal lines, an appearance of breadth is given which is further enhanced by the many roofs, every one legitimate. The basement walls to a watertable placed at the window sill of the first floor are covered with four-inch cedar siding. Above this are shingles laid four inches to the weather. The gables are of pebble dashed cement stucco, paneled with narrow wood strips. The seven rooms are well placed. The four living rooms are closely connected on the first floor, while the three bedrooms are grouped about the bathroom hall on the second floor. Large closets are provided for all rooms and two linen closets are also provided.

A wise builder buys good plans.

463—This is in every way a characteristic Craftsman Bungalow and is especially suited for a corner lot. The arch extending between the corner pillars in a single span gives an open effect to the porch, and provides space for light which is appreciated in the large living room. The dining room is second only to this spacious room in point of attractiveness and utility, being well lighted with windows on two sides. The kitchen is of good size and the pass pantry is especially well fitted with cupboards. The small hall which enables one to reach the bath room from any of the three bed rooms or living room without passing through the kitchen or dining room is an important item.

Estimated cost$2,800.00
 Price of plans as shown or reversed 10.00

Convenience in our plans is our main object.

597—Many unique features are embraced in this six-room bungalow design for a forty-foot lot. The house is forty-two feet by twenty-six feet. The exterior is of attractive design. The red cedar shingles on the walls laid alternately two inches and six inches to the weather are stained a tan color and those on the roof a terra cotta tone. Reference to the floor plan will show that the rooms are commodious and conveniently grouped and that every foot of available space is profitably utilized. The second floor contains two splendid bed rooms, with closets, and a lavatory.

Estimated cost$2,800.00
 Price of plans as shown or reversed 10.00

Our designs are combinations of art, science and sentiment.

320—One will go far to find a more artistic bungalow than the one reproduced here. The design of the front, the effect of the white chimney and the white base under the four casement windows, has proved one of the most attractive details we have ever shown. The floor plan shows the arrangement adapted to a bungalow of this size, and thoroughly in keeping with the design, notwithstanding the departure from the usual practice in the provision of several rooms on the second floor. The plans call for two complete bath rooms, one on each floor. Note the size of the living and dining rooms. No tightness in awarding space here.

No. 320—THE DINING ROOM

332—A very pleasing ensemble. The red brick and white cement of porch and chimney; the white painted trim of house and pergola timbers combined with the terra cotta finish of the roofing material, give just the touches of color that are needed to set off the gray of stained shingles. A small hood supplants the usual covered porch. Both living and dining rooms have beam ceilings. Each room in the house is carefully treated with regard to the use to which it was to be put. The sleeping porch is open on three sides. Note how the rooms are placed around the pass hall.

342—This beautiful design is a sister to the most popular house in America, and while differing from her sister in some essential properties, has many advantages in her own name that will repay careful consideration. The porch piers and buttresses are finished with sand sprayed cement stucco. The house is sheathed with wide and narrow boards of rough siding. The porch floor is cement. Parts of the exterior that are worthy of study are the attractively different window casings, the unique gable trim and the cut of the Swiss brackets. The plan calls for six fine rooms with numerous closets. The three bedrooms are all closely connected by the hall, off which are the dining room and pantry as well as the bath room. More than the usual amount of cabinet space is provided and the cooling cabinet and refrigerator are given space in the rear entry.

333—All in white, siding, cement porch pillars, pergola beams and porch floor. Very pretty, is it not? And it is as substantial and durable as it is pretty. Five fine, large rooms are provided. The cobblestone fireplace is in the end of the living room. The dining room has a built-in buffet as well as a china closet and is paneled five and one-half feet high. A commodious pantry is provided which will no doubt appeal to a large number of housewives. The pergola pillars are cement stucco on common brick, which assures a lasting job.

458—Departing somewhat from the exterior appearance of the conventional five-room bungalow is this pretty home. Perhaps the most attractive feature of this plan is the bed room, equipped with a reversible concealed bed, so arranged that it can be used either in the bed room or in the sleeping porch in the rear. The living room is unusually large and is divided from the dining room by an open arch. Both of the principal rooms have beam ceilings and paneled wainscoting. Although the kitchen is small, ample cupboard space is provided in the pantry. The plan affords a great deal more closet space than is generally found in a bungalow. Special notice is called to the convenient way in which the rooms are grouped around the pass hall.

335—A good example of bungalow architecture as adapted to the more rigorous northern climate. The exterior is covered with cedar shingles laid alternately in wide and narrow courses. Below the watertable, which is placed at the floor line, the walls are finished with stippled cement stucco on metal lath and concrete. Owing to the slope of the roof, two bed rooms, a sleeping porch and a toilet in addition to several closets, were made possible in the attic. Oak floors are provided in the vestibule, living room and dining room.

466—One test of the popularity of a bungalow is the number of people who have built in a similar style. In our city it is built with many variations in the detail of interior arrangement. The porch is of course the original and attractive feature of this bungalow. If properly constructed, the gable on the roof is a great success, but the plans must be followed very carefully. Although the ceiling in the second story is low, ample room is provided for two small chambers and a sleeping porch. The exterior is sided with sawed cedar shakes laid 12 inches to the weather and stained a dark gray, which forms a striking contrast to the white trim of the smooth woodwork. This is one of our very best houses.

416—The design of this bungalow is exceptionally well worked out. The porch floor is of concrete and the use of cobble stones for the porch walls and pedestals is exceedingly pleasing to the eye. The finish is slash grain selected fir and is stained a dark brown. The large living room and den with beam ceilings and low French windows opening to the front porch are attractive features of this bungalow. The pass hall between the bed rooms and kitchen is a convenience that will be appreciated by the occupant. A wide open arch with columns supporting it divides the dining room and living room. 596—The story and a half of the elevation has lent itself to a very pleasing treatment. With alternate coursed shingles, stained silver gray, white painted trim and the red burlap texture of the brick, we have a combination that is hard to beat. The flaring skirting below the heavy watertable relieves a design which otherwise might by some be considered too severe. In this plan we have the sleeping quarters entirely separated from the living room and by the same token have made it possible for one to go from front to rear of house or upstairs, without passing through any of the rooms. Upstairs we have sufficient space for one large bedroom, a smaller one and a sleeping porch.

418—This bungalow is a perfect example of bungalow architecture, and has proved to be one of the most popular styles ever designed. The unique feature of the exterior is the introduction of cobblestones for the massive porch columns. The well-proportioned roof and wide overhanging eaves lend an individuality to this design that has met with favor in every part of the United States. The shingles are laid in alternate courses and stained a golden brown to complete the scheme. The principal rooms of this house are models of convenience and comfort. 459—The light and cheerful aspect of this bungalow appeals to old and young couples alike. There is a cosy old-fashionedness about the exterior that catches the more sedate, while the wealth of light and sunshine from the multitude of windows unite to make the interior most pleasing and attractive. It is a cheerful little house with a homey arrangement and porch effects. The rough sawed cedar shakes and casement windows and other bungalow features are here prominent. Concrete blocks are here used for porch pedestals and the steps are cement. The rear porch is of ample size and can be used as a breakfast room if so desired on warm summer days.

312—An attractive design worthy to be set upon a hill is this home of six rooms. Resawed siding with vari-colored brick for the large chimney, cream or white trimmings on a dark background of roof and house give the most effective appearance. The porch, protected by the gable roof, extends across the entire width of the house. The kitchen has a large screen porch adjoining, with stairway leading to the cellar. The bed room arrangement is unique, but eminently satisfactory. A small hall gives access to dining room, kitchen and two bed rooms. The third bed room may be used as a library or den, or if preferred, the removal of the partition will convert the living room into a great hall 24 feet long and 12 feet wide.

696—This house is peculiarly adapted to climates in which no heating plants are required, but where nights are so chilly that some provision must be made for warmth. By the aid of the three chimneys, every room in the house can be thoroughly warmed, either by the open fireplaces or by stoves. The exterior is very neat and consists of several very ordinary materials, which blended together have produced a very attractive design. There is more room in this house than is shown on the floor plan. The working drawings call for a bedroom, also a complete bathroom on the second floor, in addition to that shown. The den can be very readily converted into a bedroom by the use of the disappearing bed, or the room being of sufficient size, the fireplace can be omitted and this room becomes an ordinary bedroom. All rooms are of good size and the whole plan is very pleasing.

311—There are many good points about this house aside from the gable ends. Shingles and the roughest of clinker brick should be employed to get the proper effect. The wide concrete steps leading to the main porch take off any bizarre appearance from the odd exterior. Note the entrance, with its heavy mission door flanked by old-fashioned windows. The living and dining rooms are almost one, the line of division being the buttress bookcases. The kitchen is just the right size, with cabinets one one side handy to the range and sink on the other near the light. The basement stairs lead from the kitchen, an item of importance in cold weather. The three bed rooms all open on a little hall, giving access to the bathroom, which is nearly as large as the kitchen.

A good home is a debt every man owes his wife.

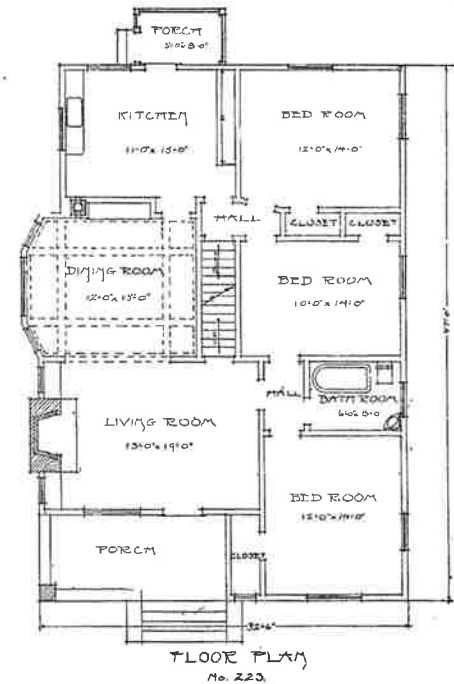

204—A cobblestone chimney and porch pillar combine with the pergola on one side and bay window on the other to give this bungalow a cozy, yet distinctive appearance. The den with its broad seat in the bay window is an ideal place for a lounging or rest room. The living room fire is in view and the wide entrance to the dining room helps to extend the vista to the buffet 35 feet away. There are three bed rooms in this house, all opening into the hall leading to the large bath room. The closet provision for the house will impress the wife at once. There is a towel closet in the bath room, one for linen in the hall, three for clothes in the bed rooms and a broom closet in the kitchen. The interior is well planned, and it is the utilization of every inch of space for some handy purpose that makes this and other bungalows so popular as homes.

223—This is a roomy house with no ginger-bread effects, yet altogether a pleasing shingled exterior. Two outside closets, three bed rooms, with another room available upstairs, show something of the excellent manner in which the bungalow is designed. The brick-faced porch and chimney give the place a substantial air of plenty, borne out by the liberal lines of the house. The living and dining rooms are connected by a wide opening which may, if desired, convert the two into practically one room. The cellar stairs are beneath the flight leading to the upper floor. Perhaps the most attractive room of the house is the dining room, large and cheerful with its huge bay window, its heavy beam ceiling and cozy buffet niche, which gives additional space for table and chairs.

334—This bungalow requires a lot at least 50 feet wide. It will be noticed that exclusive of the porches the house is 38 feet wide and only 32 feet deep. The design calls plainly for a rough texture and for light colors. The shingled walls are stained silver gray, the trim, including sash, is painted white and the roof a light green or brown. There are five large rooms on the first floor and sufficient height in the attic for two rooms and the sleeping porch.

310—A large amount of porch space is one of the essential characteristics of the most attractive bungalows, and when the lot is narrow and little space can be spared for this feature it is a problem to the architect how to get the same effect without wasting valuable ground. In this design one of the happiest solutions of the problem is found, for while the front porch is of good size the piazza effect is secured. These side porches are covered by extending the eaves. The interior arrangement is just as effective, there being a reception hall leading either into the living room or into a small hallway, extending the length of the house and giving access from all the rooms into the bath room direct. The basement stairs run from the kitchen.

201—A bath room accessible to every room in the house without passing through another room is a result often sought but seldom achieved by bungalow builders. Here with little waste of space, this object is attained by means of a neat little passageway from the large living room to the rear of the house. Instead of entering the living room directly from the porch, as in many bungalows, there is a good sized hall with coat closet and other entry accommodations. The broad opening into the living room discloses a heavily-beamed ceiling and imposing fireplace, whose large, concrete chimney forms a striking combination with the shingled exterior. The dining room is beamed and paneled, with a buffet built into the wall. The rear bed room makes a good nursery for the children with its little alcove for all manner of games. It may also be used as a sewing room with the nook for the machine and the doubly-lighted window-seat for the needle work.

300—With attractive double gables and striking contrast of stone terrace and shingled exterior, this is a typical southern bungalow, adapted to cold climatic conditions. It is a genuine surprise as to size, having six large, well-arranged rooms with not a foot of waste space. The fireplace, flanked by book shelves and window seat, is an ornament both within and without, its outside brick chimney affording an ideal footing for climbing vines. The terrace of dressed stone must be seen to be appreciated fully. A fine idea, that of having the laundry trays on the enclosed back porch. The closet space is extended rather than cramped by this porch. Think of it, a closet for every room. There are four large and two small closets, one for coats and hats off the living room and for linen off the hall leading into the bath room.

210—A two-story house whose exposed rafters, wide eaves, rustic siding and clinker brick porch supports and columns give it the bungalow air, is shown here for the family which prefers the sleeping rooms on the second floor. The exterior trim includes caps over the windows and a ledge extending across the full width of the porch. The entry hall has an attractive staircase and landing leading to the second floor. A passageway takes one directly into the kitchen if desired. A wide opening with a charming arch connects living and dining rooms, permitting the warmth of the corner fireplace to permeate both. The bath and bed rooms are on the second floor, the stairs ending in a hallway on which these rooms all open. There is opportunity to make a private servant's room of the storage space under the front eaves by cutting in a skylight or installing a dormer window.

Bed room windows should give light to your dressing table.

243—Almost like a palatial cottage is the exterior of this bungalow, with its irregular lines of roof taking away the small, uniform appearance found in many bungalows. Designed for a deep, narrow lot, the rooms are all carefully proportioned, more attention being paid to pantry and closet space than is usual in small homes. Shelves are provided in both of the large closets, as well as in the large pass pantry, with sink and drain boards in it. The bed rooms are at either corner of the house, with hall connecting and bath room between. The living room off the substantial-looking porch has beam ceiling and artistic entrance to the dining room. The latter has an immense bay jutting out from the side of the wall, with six lights and a ledge within for flowers, or if preferred for a window seat.

415—This small and attractive home has been very popular everywhere. The photograph fails to do justice to its real beauty. The outside is a combination of the rustic siding and clinker brick. The house being on the more extreme bungalow order, finds especial favor in communities building the cottage style of houses. A more convenient plan can not be found. The buffet in the dining room is larger than in most small houses, being five feet wide. The fireplace is of pressed brick with a cut stone shelf. A kitchen cabinet is designed complete, having doors and drawers below the counter shelf and a cupboard above built to the ceiling. There is a cement basement in this house, with a stairway opening from the rear porch.

324—This bungalow makes a very pleasing and inviting home in every respect. The fireplace and porch columns are stucco finish. Every room in the house is of good proportion and there is every desirable convenience. The screened porch is of good size. A little hallway between the bed rooms is a good feature, giving entrance from any part of the house to the bath. In every way we recommend this as one of our most desirable bungalows. There is ample room on the second floor for a couple of small chambers, as well as a sleeping porch in the rear.

He that has a bungalow to put his head in, has a good headpiece.

211—Rustic siding and cobblestone effects in porch-facing and chimney are employed in this cozy five-room bungalow of the most accepted type. The stone enclosure of the porch capped with cement, forms a wide ledge with a couple of steps alongside the pillars for flowers and plants. The arch extending between the corner pillars in a single span gives an open effect to the porch and provides space for light from without and view from within. This is appreciated in the big living room. The window seat at one end and the fireplace at the other serves to make this the most inviting room in the house. This large room adapts itself to the most effective style of finish and furnishings. The dining room is second only to this spacious room in point of attractiveness and utility. A small hallway enables one to reach the bath room from the bed rooms, kitchen or dining room without passing through the other chambers.

417—The photograph speaks for the attractiveness of the exterior and the plan suggests how cozy and comfortable the interior may be made. The fireplace and porch columns are stucco finish; the outside is cedar shingles. The closets are all large. Every room of the house is of good proportion and there is every desirable convenience. The linen closet in the pass hall has a clothes chute leading to the basement. The basement occupies the space under the bed room, bath and kitchen, and is floored with concrete. This is a very desirable home for any locality.

221—Unpretentious in exterior appearance, this bungalow contains a multitude of special features that cannot fail to win approval on every hand. The living room opens on both porches, one railed in with a rustic fence and the other open to the street. The mantel is wide and at either side are broad, inviting seats, forming a partial enclosure in which the family and guests may gather and toast marshmallows or pop corn of a winter's evening. The dining room is provided with casement windows and the pair opening out onto the porch may if desired be French windows, serving as doors at need. There is a neat pass pantry leading to the kitchen, off which latter room a porch abuts. A hall leads from the kitchen to the three bed rooms and living room, with openings for linen and coat closets, for the cellar stairs and into the bath room.

430—An extremely popular style of building in all parts of the West. It makes a very pleasing and inviting home in every respect. The porch is eight by seventeen feet with heavy cement columns in battered forms. The living room with its low French windows opening on to the terrace is one of the attractive features of this design. The kitchen and pantry are models of convenience and contain all the necessities. The screen porch is of good size. 465—This is certainly a most pleasing design and is a characteristic Craftsman bungalow. The cobblestones used in the porch pedestals and fireplace are very artistic. The plan of the house answers all the requirements of the average small family and includes a large open air sleeping porch that could be finished as a bed room if desired. The buffet in the dining room is larger than in most bungalows, being five feet wide. It contains deep drawers and cupboards for the accommodation of a large quantity of china and linen. The fireplace mantel is of cut stone and is very massive in appearance. The large window in the living room is plate glass. A New Jersey man who secured the plans of this house describes it as the most aristocratic little home he ever saw.

Study your surroundings—they are important.

Interior Design 312—This interior shows the use which can be made of beam ceilings. Both the living and dining rooms are beamed, while a wainscoting of wood may be employed with great effectiveness for the walls of the former. The entrance to the dining room, with its short, square columns and high paneling, is very attractive. The sandstone fireplace, with ledge of stone for mantel shelf and stained glass windows on either side, makes a very pleasing contrast to the dark woodwork so prominent in the room.

Interior Design 412—A simple but attractive interior, showing the use of square tile for the mantel. The interior woodwork is square design, and the whole is finished in a dark brown with light cream ceilings. The stained art glass used in the high windows on either side of the fireplace lends the touch of color needed to make the whole a most pleasing effect. The walls of this living room are tinted a deep tan, while the ceiling is a light cream tone. The dining room, a glimpse of which is had through the arch, is paneled five feet six inches high with slash grain fir panels capped with a plate rail.

A cooling cabinet can be arranged in almost any kitchen.

Hints on Bungalow Building—Pointers

Build a house which will sell readily. An attractive house will command a better price by several hundred dollars than the common kind, and it costs no more.

Use the best shingles on your roof; it is false economy to use a cheap grade of roofing. Your roof should be as simple as possible; every valley means a weak place that might leak.

Don't use cheap cement or mix it weak. This is not an item of heavy expense, but a very important one.

Closets should be put in wherever you can find available space. Cut down the size of rooms if necessary.

Use plenty of windows. Glass is cheaper than lumber. Be sure and have the kitchen with sink right under a window.

Have your fireplace built right. Avoid smoke and excessive discomfort by having it built according to our detail plans.

Don't build a bath room without outside windows or located so that it cannot be reached without going through a bed room or kitchen. (This is a fault with many small cottages and apartments that can just as well be avoided.)

A clothes chute in the bath room is mighty handy; it can be arranged with a seat on either side and a locker under.

See page three regarding special plans.

Gained by years of Actual Experience

Care should be used in arranging the position of your windows and doors. By all means place windows so that a draft may be had from any direction to air rooms. Consider the position of beds and other large pieces of furniture. Bed room windows should give good light to your dressing table.

Arrange your kitchen to prevent extra steps. Don't build an old style pass-pantry when you can have a neat, compact, buffet kitchen such as we put in our bungalows.

Use good hardware on your front door and a good lock on your back door, even if you have to use cheap locks on inside doors.

A cooling closet is a necessity, but it should never be built next to an outside wall. It is more apt to be a heater than a cooler if so located.

Don't let your carpenter fool you into starting without detail plans. He can not execute the work as well without them, and the best he can do is to make a patched-up job that resembles the design. More than that, he has everything his own way. He may say that he will do this or that, but there are a hundred things, probably far more important, of which he will say nothing, but which deeply concern you, and these are things for which you may have to pay a fancy extra price when they should have been included in the original contract. Don't be penny wise and pound foolish. You may save money in the beginning, but in the end lose several hundred dollars on account of not having a complete set of plans and specifications.

338—Unfortunately our photographer was unable, owing to local conditions, to show the attractive side of this bungalow, but with the assistance of the floor plan, one can readily see a pretty design. The rather large expanse of plain roof is relieved by a gable dormer, just large enough to look right, and provide enough light in the attic. The little touch of vertical boarding in the side gables, sets off the simplicity of the shingled walls. The porch walls and piers are red paving brick laid up in colored mortar. The floor plan arrangement is very good, calling for six fine rooms of splendid size and every imaginable built-in feature; bookcases, china closets, buffet, ample cabinet space in kitchen, and last but not least, the neat Pullman diner. Properly set off by shrubbery and lawn, this bungalow makes an artistic home in any neighborhood.

617—This bungalow, built in the midst of a row of bungalows, is easily the most successful in plan and design of the entire row. The exterior—the repeating lines of the heavy piers of the porch, its brick capped wall providing fine supports for additional flower boxes and the exceptional treatment of the roof lines—had a great deal to do with the success of the design. The designer had a lucky day when he schemed out this plan, for he has in a space twenty-eight by thirty-eight obtained five of the largest and best arranged rooms we have ever seen. Every room is well lighted with the windows so placed that they do not interfere with the placing of furniture to the best advantage.

464—A good substantial bungalow of the Craftsman type with every requisite for comfort. It has very pretty exterior lines, broken artistically by heavy exposed rafter ends and large brackets; a good roomy porch with cobblestone foundation and pillars. Clinker brick may be used if desired. The log cabined belt course and the cedar shakes exposed eighteen inches to the weather and stained gray form a striking exterior. The floor plan is self-explanatory. Note the open fireplace with cozy seat on the side; the buffet in dining room; the handy kitchen and pass pantry; convenient bath rooms, etc. The low roof line of this design is obtainable only by using a prepared roofing, as shingles laid on as flat a roof as this would not shed water. There are several brands of roofings, which can be recommended, the makers of which furnish a guarantee against leakage.

412—In every way this is a typical Craftsman bungalow. Wide, overhanging eaves and extra heavy verge board make it very substantial in appearance. Cobblestones for the large single porch column add a pleasing touch to the otherwise plain exterior. The use of pressed brick with cobblestones laid in a vine design makes this massive fireplace very unique. The exterior is of sawed cedar shakes stained silver gray, which harmonizes with the white trim of the smooth woodwork and gray cobblestone. The roof, though low, has cross gables and is plenty high enough for a couple of small chambers and sleeping porch in the upper story. Opening from the living room through a single sliding door is a den, with a built-in wall bed, so arranged that it can be used for a bed room in case of an emergency. The bed room is larger than is ordinarily found in a bungalow. It has two windows and an alcove on one side, just large enough for a bed. Leading from the kitchen is a latticed porch, which can be used as a breakfast room.

Our designs are combinations of art, science and sentiment.

460—The exterior of this beautiful home is a strikingly attractive combination of vari-colored cobblestones for the walls of the porch and the fireplace, shingled walls and heavy brackets. The shingles are almost the natural color with light brown stain, and the trimmings are painted a very dark brown. Cobblestones properly selected and laid up are very artistic, but the use of native materials like any other good thing can be easily over-worked. One must have a good understanding of the "eternal fitness of things" or a rustic effect among things of another style will look out of place. The living room is large and well lighted, connecting to the dining room by a large arch. The dining room is paneled and ceiling beamed and the extra large built-in buffet directly opposite the square bay window adds a pleasing touch to this attractive room.

Estimated cost$1,900.00

Have your fireplace built right—see our plans.

340—The heavy brick work of porch walls and piers is probably the predominant feature. The large cement urns which are an integral part of the masonry work, providing novel plant holders, are rather unusual. Next to the brickwork, the effective treatment of porch soffit and the repeated vertical lines of the porch gable help take this house out of the ordinary class. The brackets supporting the verge boards show an interesting bit of band saw art. The floor plan is a marvel of compactness and utility, providing six fine rooms of the maximum size possible in the ground space, 24 feet by 46 feet, with the minimum amount of space devoted to hall. The den is a very attractive room, with cleverly designed fireplace, a seat and bookcases. The dining room has china closets and a buffet. The kitchen shows a good arrangement of cabinets.

339—Rather unique in treatment, the long lines of verge and ridge, the different porch rail and the massive 8x8-inch brackets and lookouts, lend a distinction seldom seen in a home of like size and cost. The porch floor and steps are cement while the corner piers of the porch are shingled. The space under the roof is ventilated by providing a small gable dormer with latticed wall. Special care was taken in designing the rooms which go to make up this splendid five-room plan. Designing is the correct word—mere planning would never produce the results shown—each room is complete. No guess work here, not an unnecessary line drawn and not a line left out which would be needed to provide comfort and beauty. Economy is also thought of, one chimney serves every need.

247-A.—The use of brick and cement for the foundation and upper story, respectively, with siding sandwiched in, makes the outside of the house very pleasing in appearance. The porch extends nearly across the front of the house and has a large square timber for a support at either corner. The braces protrude through the verge board rather than appearing beneath it. Entering the living room from the porch, one finds the mantel on the outer wall, affording opportunity for an attractive chimney of rough brick without. There is a broad arch leading to the dining room, which is beamed and has a square window at the side with seat beneath. Back of the kitchen is a good-sized porch and a pretty built-in breakfast nook. A hall connects the bedrooms with the dining room and bath room.

Here, too, is a very good dining room fourteen feet by fourteen feet, a kitchen twelve by twelve with full equipment of sink, cupboards, cooler and bins, a couple of bed rooms with great closets, a large bath room hall with linen closet and a very good bath room withal. Our plans are revelations in the utilization of space.

446—With five rooms on one floor, this bungalow is one of the most attractive designs we show in this book. It is laid out in the most simple manner possible, with the living room occupying the entire front. The living and dining rooms have oak floors, paneled walls and beam ceilings. There is an unusual arrangement of the bed room hall, removing the former from any noise in the rest of the house. The kitchen is of good size and convenient. In addition to the regular fixtures, it has a large built-in ventilated cooler. This house has a more graceful and finished appearance than many of the rustic bungalows.

559—Five good rooms arranged in a very compact plan. The exterior is of wide and narrow boards alternate. The porch walls and buttresses of clinker brick are fine bits of design, and are built to last forever. The living room has beam ceiling. The fireplace is at the end opposite the entrance door flanked on one side with a seat and on the other by a neat bookcase. Both the bed rooms are convenient to the bath room and each room is provided with a roomy closet.

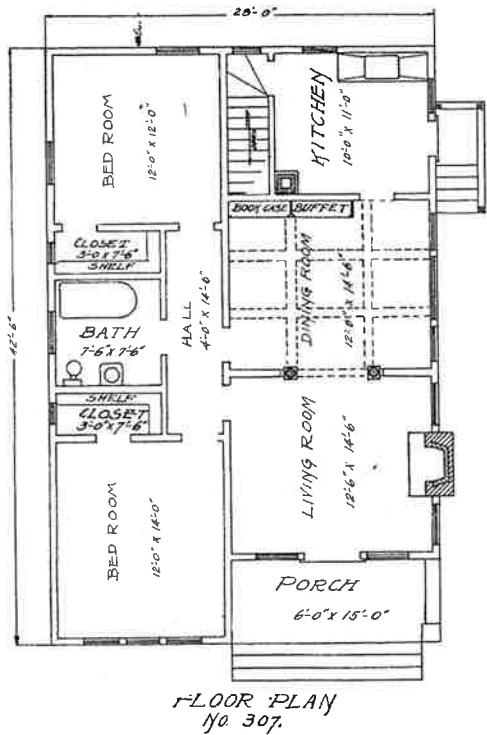

The design and not the amount of lumber, draws forth the favorable comment.

278-B—Many original ideas are apparent in this bungalow, more on the exterior than within, which follows one of the most satisfactory designs. The curved arch of the cozy little porch entrance and the concrete columns passing through the roof and slightly curved at the ends are the first distinctive parts to impress the observer. The front door is largely of glass, with diamond-shaped panes of large size. The windows beside it are long and narrow and also have the diamond pane, as do the upper sashes of the front and side windows. The living room extends across the full width of the house and gets the light from the wide windows on either side of the door, and from the door itself. There is a small porch off the kitchen. Note the compact arrangement of the bedroom closets and cellar stairway.

307—Giving a foothold for all manner of climbing vine, the clinker brick chimney and porch columns of this bungalow provide a touch of nature which relieves the otherwise severe lines of the place. A broad, deep porch sets into the front of the house and leads into a good-sized living room, with fireplace on the outer wall. Passing through the wide opening, one enters the dining room, where the eye is immediately struck by the appearance of size and features of the finish. A dark-green stain for all the woodwork, with a light burlap or Japanese paper on the walls between narrow panel strips, has been employed in the finish of this room with the best of results. The housewife is impressed by the large bed room closets—more than seven feet deep with a wide shelf along the side.

437—The exterior design is simple but artistic and composed of several very ordinary elements, so that a builder secures a very good looking bungalow at an exceedingly low cost. The porch floor and fireplace are cement and the outside is finished with shakes to the top of the windows with shingles above. Back of the porch is the living room, and den in the rear, with low French windows opening on the pergola covered veranda.

A well designed bungalow is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

341—Stone properly used can help wonderfully in the attractiveness of a house design. This bungalow has its porch work and chimney of the rough cut sandstone laid up in black cement mortar and the use of this material has given the house the necessary touch of light to set off the rather dark stain of the re-sawed cedar siding. Flower boxes enhance the beauty of the design. The floor plan illustrates an especially good arrangement, two of the best parts being the large living room, 12 feet by 23 feet, with fireplace, seat and bookcases, and the attractive Pullman diner off the kitchen. Two other features about this house which are rather unusual in a bungalow of this size are the coat closet off the front room and the location of the basement stairway which is so placed that if an attic is to be finished at any time, a stairway can be installed without disturbing the ground floor plan.

Estimated cost$1,750.00

The planning of a bungalow home is an art.

309—Search far and wide and it would be hard to find a better looking or more satisfactory bungalow than this for two or three people. Rough brick for the large outside chimney and the four porch columns add a pleasing touch to the otherwise plain exterior. The living room is at the left on entering the reception hall and the dining room on the right, the former having a wide entrance with pillars and arch and the latter arranged with sliding doors, so that after the meal is over the servant can do the work without being in view of guests or household. The door between the kitchen and dining room is at the extreme side.

279—Something totally different is found in the combined cobble and brick chimney which forms such an important item in the exterior of this home. A base of large cobbles supports the chimney with varied designs in stone covering part of the brickwork even to the top, which carries a cement cap. Very plain and solid are the braces which support the overhanging roof. In fact, the chimney is the only digression from the dignified simplicity of the entire exterior. Within it is different. The living room has a huge, ornate mantel, while the arched opening into the dining room affords opportunity for the most elaborate play of the architect's fancy. The bed room arrangement is excellent. The dining room bay is ten feet long, giving space for a little greenery or other flowery nook, and adding much to the enjoyment of the daily meals.

308-A—In plan the same as Number 308 on page seventy-nine, but in exterior so different. The porch treatment, the spreading pedestals of clinker brick and the heavy columns surmounting same are just the right size. The smooth siding on the walls is right, rough siding on this would have spoiled the effect. We have tried again and again but we have never yet conceived a plan arrangement as acceptable to as many people as this has been.

277—A snappy design, this, with the four large columns of the porch and double pergola suggesting in miniature the imposing colonial or southern mansion. While adding dignity, these columns do not detract from the cozy appearance of the bungalow. This is enhanced by the broad seats at either side of the wide entrance. The artistic merit of the pillars is doubled by their graduated base and cap blocks. A dainty little reception hall is found after passing through the door with the living room on one hand and the dining room on the other. The fireplace is in the dining room, necessitating only one chimney for the mantel and the kitchen range as well. The bath room can be reached from any room in the house except the kitchen without passing through another room.

425—Here is another popular plan of five rooms. Note the large size of the rooms, and the convenience of arrangement. The exterior is covered with six-inch lap cedar siding and trim of surfaced fir. The living room, dining room and den have plain oak floors and are finished with slash grain fir. The bath room is white enamel. Two pantries are provided off the kitchen, assuring plenty of storage space for provisions and utensils. In every way we recommend this house to the lover of a snug, artistic home. The design of the large fireplace is one that assures the maximum of heat in the room with the minimum of smoke. The detail shows a mantel that will look equally well in either paving or clinker brick. It is truly the heart of the home.

Floor Plan No. 411

411—This bungalow is entirely new and original in design. The exterior is composed of several very ordinary elements, so that the builder secures an extraordinary bungalow at an exceedingly low cost. The use of clinker brick and resawed cedar siding makes this bungalow very pleasing in appearance. The porch floor is cement, as are also the wide steps. The interior is just as pleasing in appearance as the exterior. A small entry leads to the living room, which has a fireplace on the outer wall, affording a foothold for clinging vines without. The arch between the living room and dining room contains two built-in china closets with adjustable shelves. The kitchen is just the right size, with cabinets on two sides, with sink beneath the window, affording a flood of light. The basement stairs lead from kitchen, which is an important item in cold weather.

421—This bungalow, though not large, possesses pleasing characteristics. The walls are covered with rough cedar siding, stained a dark brown, and the casings, brackets, and posts are trimmed in white. The five rooms afford sufficient accommodations for a medium-sized family, and the finish is such that the occupant can be proud of his home. The rooms are large, and better laid out than the average bungalow, also having more of the modern conveniences. The pantry has a two-foot work shelf with doors below and a well designed cupboard. The arch between the dining and living rooms is designed for service as well as for looks, containing a bookcase having adjustable shelves. The top of the bookcase is 51½ feet high and carries heavy, square pillars which support an arch between the rooms. The screened porch is large enough for a refrigerator.

411-B—Five rooms arranged in the most approved manner with a reception hall additional. Rough cedar siding is used for the body of the house and the porch columns are of selected clinker brick. The verge boards are especially heavy, being in one piece three inches thick and fourteen inches wide. The lifting of the gable points is a fine suggestion. Details are included with the plans for fireplace, the china closets in the buttresses between living and dining rooms and the full kitchen equipment.

434-A—This neat little bungalow has a substantial appearance not very often found in a house that costs as little as this one. The living room occupies the entire front and has a built-in seat across one end and an open fireplace directly opposite. The dining room has beam ceiling, paneled wainscoting, and a built-in buffet containing a disappearing bed so arranged that it can be used as a bed room if desired. The pass hall leading to the bath room has a clothes closet and a large built-in linen locker. This house can be built on a lot as narrow as 30 feet.

439-A—Overhanging eaves, a wide verge board, with heavy exposed rafter ends make the exterior of this bungalow unique and cozy in appearance. The entrance leads directly into the living room, which is divided from the dining room by a wide, open arch. The interior is arranged along the best bungalow lines. A small hallway leads from the dining room to the front bed room and bath. The kitchen has a built-in cabinet and a stairway leading to the basement. The basement is 20x26 and has a concrete floor.

422—This aristocratic little bungalow is one of our most pleasing designs. The use of rough clinker brick and cobblestone adds a pleasing touch to the otherwise plain exterior. The specifications call for rough cedar siding as high as the watertable with shingles above. The front of the house is divided into the living room and den, which is equipped with a disappearing bed so arranged that it can be converted into a chamber, if desired. The dining room has a large window seat with a locker under and a built-in buffet of extraordinary design. Between the rear porch and kitchen is a vestibule just large enough for a refrigerator.

321-A—This is one of our most popular low priced bungalows and has the appearance of costing several hundred dollars more than it really does. Avoiding a stuffy vestibule, entrance is made directly into the living room. The house has only four rooms, but all are of good size and provide ample space for a small family. The more the plan is studied, the more one appreciates the conveniences of this compact little home. The house has a concrete basement under the rear half. The siding is of 6 and 12-inch rustic boards, laid alternately.

423—There is nothing striking in the make-up of this little home, but there is an indescribable charm in its graceful lines, and home-like appearance. A part of the porch is covered and a part remains open with a pergola top, over which vines are trained. The large living room occupies the entire front and has an open fireplace in one end with seats on either side. The dining room has the usual beam and panel work and contains a dis-appearing bed. Heavy columns supporting an open arch divide the living room and dining room. The bed room has a clothes closet and a door leading directly to the bath.

325—This attractive bungalow is an interesting study in plan and design on account of its direct style. Note the manner in which every available bit of space is utilized. The porch columns are finished in the popular cement stucco. The exterior is shingled and is stained a silver gray, which forms a pleasing contrast with the white trim of the smooth woodwork. 426—Here is a novel little home quite on the rustic style. While the exterior is quite modest, it includes accommodations generally found with a more pretentious front. The den is so situated that it can be used as a bed room. The fireplace and porch pedestals are finished in the popular cement stucco. The outside walls are covered with dimension shingles and are stained a dark brown, which forms a pleasing contrast to the white trim of the window sash.

A low bid is not always the cheapest.

FLOOR PLAN

306—Realizing that the living room is the most important feature of the bungalow home, the designer has subverted the prominence of all the other rooms of this unique residence to emphasize that of the living room. Entered from a wide porch through a solid door flanked by high, narrow leaded glass windows, this room is found to include dining apartment as well. A series of five windows on the side give ample light to and afford a view of the outside from every corner. The kitchen is tucked away behind the fireplace, with the stairs leading to the basement in the kitchen corner. The two bed rooms are connected by a hallway leading to the bath room and also having an opening into the living room. The exterior is worthy a few words, as the pyramid column of light brick supporting the porch roof at the corner forms practically the only unusual feature of the front.

444-A—A sensible bungalow design with a standard four-room plan. The living room occupies the entire front of the house and is equipped with a disappearing bed. The dining room has a bay window with seat beneath. Take notice of the manner in which every bit of available space is utilized, as shown by the closet arrangement for bed rooms and the handy linen closet. 453-A—The easy sloping roof and double gables give this design the hospitable appearance so much desired in the home exterior. By the use of several very ordinary elements, the builder is able to construct a house at a cost that is far less than one would think at a first glance. The porch foundation, pedestals and railing are cement blocks, and the fireplace is built of clinker brick pointed up with black mortar. The interior is a standard, five-room plan and is used more than any plan shown in this book.

436—The photograph of this bungalow does not do it justice, as it shows the plain side rather than the attractive side of the house. The living room has an open fireplace, six feet wide with art glass windows on each side. The bed room arrangement is very convenient; the small hall providing entrance to the bath room, without going through any other room. The cedar shakes which are such a prominent part of this design are simply rough cedar boards one-half an inch thick and six inches wide, sawed into thirty-six inch lengths and laid on the wall with half their lengths exposed to the weather.

550—A ground space 26 feet by 34 feet has seldom produced a better four-room arrangement than is here illustrated. The exterior is one that has never failed to call out favorable comment. The cement stuccoed skirting contrasts well with the stained shingles and woodwork. The four rooms are so grouped around the pass hall that one can readily reach any room in the house, except the dining room without passing through any other room. The kitchen is well provided with cabinet space and china closet and book cases are built in the buttresses of the dining room and living room arch. The old-fashioned closet in the bedroom has given way to the up-to-date wardrobe where the articles you want are not covered up by a dozen that you do not want. The splendid sleeping porch is worthy of mention—all the fresh air that you can possibly desire is yours.

443—To the man that wants something different, we can submit this bungalow. The design has a touch of gingerbread work that so many want in a bungalow. The interior is well planned and provides a den, with a disappearing bed arranged so that it can be used as a chamber. A small hall makes the bath very accessible from any part of the house. The plan calls for a cement basement 24 feet square.

Your kitchen and bath room should have a high wainscot of washable plaster or cement.

No. 456-A—THE CEMENT STUCCO BELOW THE WATERTABLE IS A PLEASING BIT OF DESIGN

456-A—Same compact plan as Number 456 on page 103, but different in its porch treatment. The four rooms are arranged to get the largest amount of room and provide for a screened porch in the rear. The exterior walls below the watertable and the porch pedestals are cement stucco on metal lath. Above this the walls are cedar shingles laid six inches to the weather about one inch apart. The head casing of the windows is carried around the house as a belt course.

456-B—A five-room plan, twenty-four feet by thirty-six feet, with a cement floored basement under the rear half of the building. In exterior appearance the same as 456-A, and also the same in construction and finish, except that the front porch and steps are wood instead of cement. The rooms are all of good size and are well arranged, every bit of space being utilized. The screened porch is large and provides a splendid place for the refrigerator.

303—A living room that embodies every idea of that term is a notable part of this cozy little bungalow. The room is 16 feet square and is a combined living and dining room. The corner opposite the stone or brick mantel is devoted to the buffet, fitting into the wall and leaving a wide expanse of room for the round mission table. This, when not in use for dining purposes, may be protected with a bit of drawn work or embroidered centerpiece, and with a fern dish or flower bowl will make a very attractive bit of the room furniture. A large corner bed room opens from the living room, while another door leads into the hall connecting the second bed chamber with the kitchen and bath room. A rear porch provides space for the ice chest and the entry to the basement.

242—Departing from the customary style of houses, this bungalow is designed to adorn a lot having a view at the rear or living room corner. The arrangement places all the bed rooms on the front of the house and affords an unobstructible view from the large living room windows away from the street. By the use of three small porches set into the house, the bed rooms are well lighted and ventilated. The center porch forms the entrance to the house, a small vestibule leading directly into the large living room, 13 feet wide and 22 feet long. This room has casement windows similar to those of the bed rooms and dining room, a pair opening onto the side porch, another pair flanking on either side of the chimney and side by side on the view side of the room. A dainty kitchenette extends off the dining room, dividing space with the bath room, which is alongside a wood house, storage room or spare bed room, as may be preferred.

462-A—A half-timber effect, with lap siding substituted for the usual cement plaster in the panels, presenting a rather unique, but pretty, appearance. The plan is a convenient one—the builder gets the maximum amount of usefulness for the lowest possible cost. The four rooms are grouped about the central chimney in such a way that a stove can be placed in both dining room and bed room, as well as in the kitchen, thus assuring a warm home at all times. At a slight additional cost a fireplace can be built in the end of the living room, where the three windows are, that would add much to the homelike appearance of the room.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

In the past seventeen years thousands of bungalows have been built from my plans, in every state of the Union and in several foreign countries, including France, Australia, Panama and Cuba. They have given universal satisfaction, providing their owners with attractive, modern and comfortable homes. I have planned them of every size and type, and of all materials and combinations of materials.

When you build your home, why not incorporate in your plans some of the many built-in features which I have devised to make housework a pleasure rather than a drudgery? And use a design that will be a source of pride not only to you, who know the interior, but to those who are merely passersby.

Note the following letters, where they come from, and what they have to say. Your plans would be the same. Scarcely a mail fails to bring its quota of similar messages.

"Yours at hand and contents noted, also the plans came in good condition. We thank you for your pains and certainly you have 'drawn a house' this time. We have studied the new plans very thoroughly and have not as yet found one objectionable feature and you could not have drawn it nearer to our ideas, if you had been here with us. Thanking you once more and with best Christmas wishes, I beg to remain,"

LUCIEN E. ROUSE, Torrington, Conn.

"I am living in the house you planned for me and like it very much. I want to build another small bungalow" * * *

H. E. CONNER, Akron, Ohio.

"I could not begin to tell you how well pleased I am with the plans which I received the" * * * *

MRS. FRANK M. DAVIS, Richmond, Mo.

"Plans came last night, many thanks; am much pleased with them."

S. J. GARDINER, Clarkson, Ont.

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your most excellent plans for bungalow, as per order. They far exceed my expectations. In fact, I hardly see how it is possible for you to furnish, for the price, so perfect a set of blueprints with specifications. I am most pleased, as is also my husband."

JANE G. ROEBER, Richmond, Va.

"Acknowledge receipt of blueprints and specifications of plan No. 524, and am very much pleased with same."

JOSEPH T. SLAVIN, Baltimore, Md.

"Am sending you a post card with picture of a bungalow I built for myself from one of your plans. Found the working plans easy to build from and am well pleased with the house."

O. E. WAGNER, Enterprise, Oregon.

Sometimes my plans so please the client that he expresses himself very emphatically. The following two letters are from one who purchased five sets of plans in a space of very few months:

"Our house, No. 327, is a regular picture and seems to be the talk of the town or else everybody's kidding me. * * * * The house itself is a wonder for beauty." * * *

J. R. SUPPLE, Kalamazoo, Mich.

"Received your 'toney' plans, No. 659, this afternoon. * * * * These plans are so beautiful that I am going to build the house on a lot three times as large and location of the best in town."

J. R. SUPPLE, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Mr. J. S. Andrews, of Tampa, Florida, is evidently a very busy man; he generally telegraphs when he wants plans. At various times he has purchased six entirely different plans—not a plan has been returned.

It is not always what they say to me that counts. Mr. Paul C. Murphy, of Portland, Oregon, has purchased a large number of plans. Mr. F. C. Ives, of Rutland, Vermont, is one of those who looks before he leaps. He says in one of his letters:

"I am pleased to inform you that I received a letter from Mr. Paul C. Murphy, of Portland, Oregon, in which he says, * * * * of them all we found that Mr. Yoho's designs were by far the most attractive as well as more practical from the standpoint of floor plans, and so far we have used his plans almost exclusively in the erection of some fifty bungalows." * * *

I have recently completed a splendid special design for Mr. Ives. Space and modesty prohibit any more of these, but I wish it understood that any plans purchased from me carry also the privilege of consultation in regard to the construction or finishing of any part of the bungalow; in fact, your entire satisfaction is what I want.

Cordially,

The Bungalow Craftsman
Seattle, U. S. A.
