THE HOLSTEIN

GOTHIC BARN—36x64—12' Studs

(See specifications below)

The Gothic Roof barn is rapidly becoming the favorite of the progressive farmer, because of its neat appearance, strong construction and, above all, its large and unobstructed mow space.

Many people are afraid of these barns because they have no roof trusses in them, while others fear that they are very hard to build. These barns are really not any harder to build than the old style barn-they are just as strong and they cost no more.

If you are interested, write for further particulars—giving the size of the barn you intend to build.

SPECIFICATIONS

This barn 36x64—12' stud. All Dimension No. 1 Common; Extra A Shingles; 1x6 No. 2 Clear and Better Drop Siding; 2x6 Studs; 1x6 No. 3 Clear S. G. Flooring for mow floor; 2x10 Joists; Rafters bandsawed at the mill complete with sash and material for doors, cupalo, mangers and stall partitions as shown except cow stall fixtures.

COST OF BARNS COMPLETE
First determine the number of roof trusses you wish. These should be spaced from 10 to 14 feet apart; you will not need one in either end. In the table above you will find the price of each truss for the different width of barns. The price of the ends will also be found in the table. This price includes material for both ends complete with sash. Add to this the price of the sides—the price shown in the table is for each two feet of length in the barn. The total of these three items will give you the price of your barn f. o. b. Everett. Material for stable floors and stalls not figured.
