Bells of Peace is a collaborative program of the WWI Centennial Commission, which invites American citizens and organizations, across the entire country, to toll bells in their communities in remembrance of the lives lost in WWI.

The bell used in today's ceremony is on loan from the DuPont Community Presbyterian Church.

Originally, the bell was used aboard a steam locomotive and was saved from the scrap heap and donated by the Northern Pacific Railroad to the First Church of DuPont.

This church was dubbed the Campside Church during WWI, when it began serving the needs of the soldiers at Camp Lewis.
